

Bryan Hoffman, MA

Bryan Hoffman is national association executive with health policy expertise in healthcare workforce issues and education transformation. As Deputy Director for OADN and the OADN Foundation, Bryan serves as the chief operations official responsible for coordinating business strategies in alignment with the organization's strategic plan. Bryan oversees OADN's core business processes and collaborates with leadership in the development and implementation of strategic advocacy and communications.

For the past eight years, Bryan has worked directly on scalable nursing education transformation in the United States. As Program Manager for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Academic Progression in Nursing Program, or APIN, he worked with the American Hospital Association, American Organization of Nurse Executives, AARP, OADN, and numerous state-level organizations to advance education opportunities for nurses. Through this work, Bryan first became acquainted with the OADN membership and tremendous work they do in preparing the nursing workforce of this nation.

Prior to his work on national nursing issues, Bryan served as a technical advisor and subcontractor for the United States Agency for International Development, where he specialized in gender policy for local governance and civil society capacity building – with regional experience in the Middle East and West Africa. Bryan has lived abroad in Damascus, Syria and Bologna, Italy. He holds a master's degree in international health and development from the School of International Service at American University in Washington, DC. Bryan earned his bachelor's degree in education from Ohio Wesleyan University. He lives in Seattle, Washington where he enjoys all that the great Pacific Northwest has to offer.
